

Muyuna

The Muyuna Amazon Lodge is located in the Yanayacu river banks at 140 km southeast from Iquitos city, the capital of the Peruvian department of Loreto, very close to the Pacaya-Samiria National Reserve, with its 2 080 000 hectares is the biggest in Peru. This is why it is possible to guarantee that the passengers will observe animals in their own habitat.

Yanayacu means «black water» (in quechua, the Inca's language), because of the darkness given by the minerals that it brings from the highlands. The ten lakes that are around Muyuna also have black water, making easier the fishing and bird watching excursions.

The Muyuna Lodge can receive up to 48 people in only 11 bungalows of two, three, four or six beds. They have their private bathroom with modern tiles, comfortable big beds and a walk-in-closet. The illumination is made by the use of kerosene lamps. Each bungalow is protected hermetically by a mosquito net and has a terrace with its own hammock, facing the river, where is possible to watch Dolphins as well as fish in the river's flood times. Your passengers can be pleased by colorful sunsets and by the deafening silence of the rainforest at night.

Close to the lodge is San Juan de Yanayacu, a small village, where the time seems to be stopped. This people born and grew up having jungle as their habitat, without fashion mode, electricity, internet or big amounts of money. Our intention is not to change their customs, this is why the visits our tourists make to them are very spontaneous, they are not going to find a «prepared and touristy» show.
